

global corporate client the brief was to examine a broad swathe of unstructured information which had grown organically in an internal system over a decade, intelligently catalogue and provide insights and recommendations on migration to a new platform

the client

the client was a large corporate with various acquisitions in need of streamlining outputs

the objective

the project involved eighteen of four providing a small team to examine the data for a three-month period, working on analysing the best course of action for migration, examining the system's inadequacies and flaws and advising on the platform build ahead of migration

the solution

- our team examined the system with a detailed approach, cataloguing existing data held and breaking down what was needed and what could be archived ahead of migration
- data was then presented in report format with recommendations for next steps ahead of migration

the results

- project delivered to rave reviews by client and company completing the platform build
- client will re-engage when the platform is built to continue to build out the new system and embed improved processes
